Introduction

In 1948, the Bureau of Labor Statistics instituted a program of wage chronologies. This program was designed to present, in summary form, changes in wages and related compensation practices made by specific employers or groups of employers, usually through agreements reached as a result of collective bargaining. The chronologies are intended primarily as tools for research and analysis. As such, they deal only with selected features of the varied history of collective bargaining or wage administration in each case. References to job security, union security, grievance procedures, employment practices, and similar matters are omitted. The situations selected for study are believed to have significance for wage determination that extends beyond the specific settlements. For a more detailed explanation of the purpose and scope of the chronology program, see "Wage Chronologies and Salary Trend Reports," BLS Handbook of Methods, Bulletin 1910 (Bureau of Labor Statistics, 1976), chapter 22.

This directory lists all wage chronologies issued through June 1977. Before July 1965, basic wage chronologies and their supplements were published in the Monthly Labor Review (MLR) and released as Bureau reports. Wage chronologies published later are available only as bulletins (and their supplements). Summaries of general wage changes and new or changed working practices are added to the bulletins as new contracts are negotiated.

Publications may be obtained as follows:

1. Bulletins still in print are for sale by the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402, or by the regional offices of the Bureau of Labor Statistics listed on the inside back cover.

2. Bulletin supplements and out-of-print items (marked with an asterisk) may be obtained as long as supplies last from the Bureau of Labor Statistics, Washington, D.C. 20212, or from the Bureau's regional offices.

3. All publications may be available for reference in leading public, college, and university libraries and at the Bureau's regional offices.

Material in this publication is in the public domain and may be reproduced without permission of the Federal Government. Please credit the Bureau of Labor Statistics and cite the name and number of the publication.
